

Sue Miller

Raised in small Western Pennsylvania town with a population of about 5,000.

Allegheny College, West Virginia University, Computer Science Institute.

Worked for Eastern Airlines as a computer programmer/analyst for 16 years, initially programming on a 4K IBM 1401 that took up half a hangar and required I drive across the runway at Miami International Airport to test programs when just a 21-year-old trainee.

Moved to Islamorada in 1980 with husband, Jay, and two young boys, thrilled to be back to life in a small town where individuals can make a difference.

Had our own real estate company, loved meeting people from all walks of life and varied locations, helping them make life-changing decisions.

Got involved in the community, with youth activities and the schools, community organizations and local government issues.

Still here, same house on Lower Matecumbe, same love for Islamorada that brought us here years ago.
